Many of our people have become tired of the fish law. It is said that the law has been frequently violated and that small dams constructed for the purpose of fishing with set-nets can be seen at many points in the river. Whether the law is violated or not we do not know, but we do know that such an opinion is entertained by many persons. The law should be enforced or repealed. We are not how objectionable a law may be, it should not be violated for the violation of any law tends to weaken the respect which the community has for law. So long as it is a law, let it be respected. If it is objectionable let the effort be made to have it repealed. If the objections be presented to our representatives and these objections be considered good, the law, we have no doubt, will be promptly repealed.

Just look at Sperry & Darby's advertisement and go for some of the bargains.

Jos. Bamber was tried at this term of county court for burglary, found guilty and his term of imprisonment in the penitentiary ascertained at four years and six months. After the verdict of the jury was made, counsel for the prisoner moved for counsel for judgment on account of some informality in the proceedings. The court has not yet rendered a decision of the question.

MT. JACKSON, VA. May 24, 1881.

Moors, Editors:—

The first pic nic of the season for our section came off last Saturday, the young folks having determined to make a horse back tour to the shortest road, one of the spurs of the Massanutten range, about four miles from town, and to have seen the young gallants running around with saddle packs, and old saddle pockets filled with good things, even down to lemon tart, would have inclined you to think another rebellion had been inaugurated. The company consisted of the following ladies and gentlemen,

CAPTAIN; VALLEY CENTRAL GUARD, K. WELLS.

High Corporal, T. J. Meem.
1st Lieutenant, K. L. Allen.
Surgeon General A. W. Rumsiselle.
2d Lieut. Augusta Guards, N. S. Stout.
Captain R. R. Rinker, Mrs. P. Lonas.
Miss F. S. Ripley, Dr. J. S. Triplett.
Miss A. A. Ripley, Mr. Russell Rosenberger, Miss F. W. Allen; Mr. Elton Henkel and Miss Ida Keller, this charming party assembled in the centre of the town, and it did the souls of the old denizens good to see so many of the old folks mounted on their prancing chargers. Before all had assembled there came up a "sprig of the law," who was disappointed in not being able to join the party, owing to an engagement previously made. However he determined to make the best of it. For only a few fleeting moments he mounted a horse and with one of the fairest started on a scout towards Hawkinsburg, some thought it might possibly be a runaway match, others said hardly, it was too sudden, however things looked suspicious, "I was said he had exclaimed,

"To give this darkening life I have seen but one bright hour since I was in all this splendor now!"

Ere long they returned when they stoutly denied any such felonious intentions notwithstanding several gallants viewed him "askant with jealous eye" At last all were off and the mountain was soon reached, when they dismounted and walked to the top where after a rest dinner was announced, and then only was discovered that one of the captain's horses was missing. He was called in vain. Search was made, when he was found locked in the arms of Morpheus on one of the highest boulders near the Tarpeian rock.

"Where the breezy breeze played through the tresses,"

He looked so contented and happy, doubtless ere he closed his weary eyelids he had quoted those old familiar lines,

"Here I lay me down to sleep
All curled up in a little heap;
If I should die before I wake
Would you please the Lord to seal me straight."

Finally all got to dinner and such a dinner there was no end to the feast of good things winding up with lemon tart, much for desert. But one thing was lacking, no water had been brought along, and there was a universal inclination to take a drink, but water was not to be had nearer than Flat Rock Spring 2 1/2 miles distant. Volunteers were called for to make the perilous descent as water they must have. Gallantly stepped forward the Surgeon General and the High Corporal. "Ladies, said they, we pledge our lives, our honor and our sacred fortunes to return with the nectar of life or gloriously perish in the attempt."

And Mr. Editor, who you have beheld them in the rosy blush of youth, with buckets in hand trimmed for the descent, with "no such word as fail" imprinted on their countenances, you would have thought the world below was on fire, and they were the head bosses of the Keystone Fire Company of New York, bent on extinguishing it. And down the steepest they went

Pell Mell, and rock and shell
They thundered very fast;
But before they reached their destined place
Like a horse on a race,
One swift gliding gallant careered
And with bucket full, sung high in air,
"Mr. Thomas went out our cord!"

They were considerably mutilated but at last they reached the spring, their buckets were filled; but to return, there was the rub, an ascent of 2 1/2 miles was not to be laughed at, but at it manfully they went and after an hour and a quarter's hard work they reached the summit where they were deservedly received as men of "noble needs."

Laurel chaplets had been entwined a circle was formed when the Surgeon General was crowned by the "Queen of Allendale" and what was left of the bruised &c. gallant corporal.

"He who had rolled where rocks were thickest
And went through brush the quickest."

Now stood the Hero of the day his brow crowned with the garland of fame bestowed by the fair hands of the "Belle of Rinkerton."

The above was the main features of the day, there were other little incidents that always occur on such occasions, a young lady was accused of having her hand squeezed, she admitted it but said it was not hurt. A lady regretted not meeting a widower when she was reminded he had "two nephews near." One gay gallant called himself a "violin"—and truthfully has the poet said we often go from "grace to grace" and vice versa, after dinner he was found in a melancholy mood wending his way to the tepid Tarpeian Rock, where after contemplating the scene below he was heard to exclaim!

I never loved a dear Galsie
To charm me with her dear blue eyes
But when it came to know me well
And love me, it was sure to die.

Yes, and I'll die! and raising he plunged himself for flight into the perilous abyss below. When he was grabbed in the rear by a friend who exclaimed, see here young man I thought you were eating too many codfish balls for dinner, "codfish balls have caused many a suicide" after expostulating with him and walking him back to the company he became more calm and seemed resigned to try and live a better life, and on the promised of his friend not to breathe the matter to a soul he soon recovered his usual flow of good spirits. One sprightly member of the party determined to scale an overhanging cliff, and despite the admonishment of friends the feat was accomplished but it was found impossible to return the same way and the vale below was only reached by climbing down a tree. This acrobatic feat was much encoered, and deservedly so. A lady found herself on a perilous rock and called for help, but Elton found he could not render assistance, and only on Russell could she rely. Another fair maiden asked the Dr. if he would "propose going home." Sun never lit on such a happy countenance, the longest for time had arrived and this pic nic was to be the happiest and overjoyfullest day of all his life and we believe it was, as he was still smiling when last heard from. Soon the party were on the descent, on reaching the spring a gay gallant hastily dismounted and filled his hat with the life sparkling nectar. Same thought was done to cool his throbbing brow overtaxed by such a joyous day when suddenly here came Elton helter skelter—his bloodied steed had gotten the better of him

"And with a flying
And his love a sighing," adown the mountain he went fortunately he checked up without accident, and soon all returned to the city after spending a delightful day.

by B. SCHMITT.

We understand that there is a strong disposition among the old confederates to organize a regiment of veteran rebs in the Valley to take part in the Yorktown celebration. Of course, it is not intended that they be uniformed or armed, but simply formed into companies and then a regiment by which they will secure better quarters, fare, &c. and be able to procure much cheaper rates of transportation. We think this a good idea, and hope to see the subject fully agitated through the Valley. Would it not be a good plan, also to invite the old vets of the other side to form similar organizations and come down and help bury the hatchet and rejoice together over a common heritage of glory. Let's hear from all around.

SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY.—We have been presented by Mr. B. Schmitt with a magnificent map of the United States, published by the Chattanooga Medicine Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn. which we shall prize for the double purpose it serves in being both useful and ornamental. Its dimensions, 28 by 44 inches, are sufficient to show every State and Territory with all the important towns and cities, and every railroad completed in the Union up to the first day of the present year. The map is neatly printed on good material and well mounted for hanging. It is worth more than the price attached to it, which is only one dollar but Mr. Schmitt proposes to present one to every purchaser of a bottle or package of M. A. Theoford & Co.'s Liver Medicine or Black-Draught. This popular family medicine has been in approved use in many of the southern States for upwards of thirty years and the liberality of the enterprising company in preparing this beautiful map for their patrons will doubtless lead to its universal acquaintance, not here alone, but throughout the whole country. The map should be in every house, whether the medicine is needed or not.
